the details of saint martin's argument contain a wealth of penetrating observations from which anyone with a serious interest in visual communication will profit journal of communication saint martin elucidates a syntax of visual language that sheds new light on nonverbal language as a form of representation and communication she describes the evolution of this language in the visual arts as well as its multiple uses in contemporary media the result is a completely new approach for scholars and practitioners of the visual arts eager to decode the many forms of visual communication

Kim Marriott Bernd Meyer communication is one of the hallmarks of humans when we think of human communication most people first think of spoken and written languages these are similar in that symbols in the language are encountered and processed sequentially either temporally as they are spoken or as characters are read across a page however not all human communication is sequential in nature important components of human communication are visual languages such as maps or diagrams in these languages the basic symbols are not encountered sequentially but rather seen together at a glance visual languages are ubiquitous in human cultures ranging from traditional paintings of central Australian aborigines which are in part maps of the countryside to an architect's design of a new building visual languages have been employed from earliest pre history to the present and are used in almost every human endeavor they cover the entire spectrum of human expression ranging from fine art such as an abstract expressionist's private language to precise technical communication using rigorously defined notation such as musical notation mathematical notation or street maps some visual languages such as sign languages used by the deaf community substitute spoken language entirely indeed sign languages for example American sign language are a particularly interesting instance of visual communication since they use three dimensional spatial arrangements of signs in combination with their sequential temporal order to constitute meaning

The visual language is a system of communication using visual elements speech as a means of communication cannot strictly be separated from the whole of human communicative activity which includes the visual and the term language in relation to vision is an extension of its use to describe the perception comprehension and production of visible signs
